COURSE DESCRIPTION AND OBJECTIVES

Business people recognize that their success is very often contingent upon the extent to which they understand the legal environment in which they operate. They know that just knowing the rules is not enough. It is imperative to really think about how particular rules of law apply to specific circumstances in order to assess the viability of a proposed course of action and to ensure that potential risks have been considered and evaluated.

This course will focus on the body of law governing the types of issues that students can expect to encounter in their roles as managers of public and private companies, consultants, and entrepreneurs. Topics for discussion include, but are not limited to: contract and cyber laws; the various forms of business structures (e.g., partnerships, corporations and limited liability companies); business torts; product liability; specific issues regarding entrepreneurs and employment law.

The objective of this course is to help develop your ability to recognize and understand legal issues in your business and personal life. By the end of the semester, you will have honed your critical thinking skills and enhanced your personal and professional judgment. You will be pleased to find that you are able to recognize and avoid or resolve legal problems in a variety of business and everyday life situations. You will also be able to work effectively with the lawyers you encounter whether in a personal or professional capacity.

COURSE PREPARATION AND OTHER ADMINISTRATIVE DETAILS

Since faculty members may have somewhat different expectations as to class behavior, set forth below are a few of my own expectations.

1. Attendance in every class is extremely important. If you must miss a class, however, please call me in advance. More than one unexcused absence will be reflected in a lower grade.

2. As a courtesy to your classmates and to me, try not to be late.

3. You should carefully read all of the assigned materials (such as textbook chapter, handouts, assignments, etc.) prior to class so that you can fully participate in the class discussion. Be prepared to be called upon. Please let me know before the start of class if some emergency has made it impossible for you to be adequately prepared.

4. Do not use e-mail to send me written assignments; submit a hard copy.

EXAMINATION AND GRADES
The final grade for the course will be based on the following components unless otherwise noted in class:
Homework and Classroom Assignments: 20%
Law Game or Entrepreneurial Game: 45%
Final examination: 35%

Please note that all requirements must be completed to pass the course. Your overall grade may be adjusted upward based on “bonuses” or downward based on “passes” (as discussed in first session of class).
