ABOUT SCIENCES PO:
In the educational tradition of Sciences Po Paris, the Undergraduate Exchange Programme offers a year of introductory coursework on France and Europe, from an international and comparative perspective drawing on a broad spectrum of social sciences: contemporary history, economics and business, international relations, law, European studies, political science and sociology. The programme allows international students to become familiar with the institution’s particular educational and methodological approach for which Sciences Po is internationally reputed.

One of the majors offered in the undergraduate exchange program is in Economics and Business, offering a specifically European focus on management studies. Students can combine specially tailored courses from Economics and Business with courses offered in other concentrations.

The program is now taught in the fall and in the spring in English. It is a fully integrated curriculum as it is offered both to students from partner universities of Sciences Po and home students.
The venue is Sciences Po’s prestigious urban campus in the historical Saint-Germain neighborhood, located in the heart of Paris.
