

Financial Aid Options for International Students

Stern Programs

Stern Scholarships & Fellowships	The Stern School of Business awards a number of highly selective, merit-based scholarships to newly admitted applicants with exceptional academic credentials, professional accomplishments, and leadership potential. The scholarship selection process is competitive and awards vary in amounts up to full tuition. If you were selected to receive a scholarship, notification will be in your letter of admission.
Graduate Assistantships & Teaching Fellowships	The Stern School of Business offers assistantships to qualified students. You must have completed at least 9 credits and be in good academic standing. A selection process by administrators and faculty members may be necessary for some positions. Each assistantship provides a partial tuition credit for the semester that you are employed and is credited directly to your tuition account.
Donor Awards	Donor Awards are scholarships that are awarded by the Stern Graduate Financial Aid Office to eligible full-time second-year students and eligible part-time students who have completed at least 30 credits towards their MBA degree. All donor awards at the Stern School of Business are merit-based and awarded in the fall semester according to the criteria established by the donors. In most cases, no separate application is necessary.

External Financial Aid Programs

Private Grants & Scholarships	Many organizations offer support for international students and we encourage you to explore these private grant and scholarship opportunities. Please visit the Admitted Student Website for information on scholarships offered by corporations that have partnered with Stern. You should also contact any civic, fraternal, religious, or service organizations with which you are already affiliated to see if they offer any assistance.
Government Support	Some countries provide support for their citizens who are studying in the United States. Contact your country's ministry of education, embassy, or consulate about possible funding.
Corporate Support (Employer Sponsorship)	You should inquire with your employer about any financial support available within your corporate organization. Contact your supervisor or human resources department for information.
Scholarship Searches	You can find information about various external scholarship opportunities on the Stern Graduate Financial Aid website, in addition to web resources that may help you find other sources of funding. Please visit the site periodically for updates: http://www.stern.nyu.edu/finaid/external

Private Loans

Private Loans	At this time, Stern international students will be eligible to borrow private loans with a U.S. co-signer. We encourage you to compare information among available student loan providers. There are no maximum income limits, but individual lenders will, at their discretion, evaluate credit history. For application information and details about terms and conditions, please visit the lender's website or contact the sponsor's toll-free number. Please note that application fees are not refundable. More information about private loan opportunities may be found by visiting the Stern Graduate Financial Aid website.
