Executive MBA classes are designed so that busy working professionals can earn an MBA with minimal disruption to their professional and personal lives. Over the course of 22 months, students earn 61 credits by participating in three one-week residencies and attending classes on Fridays and Saturdays every other week. Graduates earn an MBA degree from NYU Stern.
Engage beyond the classroom.

Executive MBA students are a part of the broader Stern community and have access to Stern-wide speaker events, panel discussions, student and alumni clubs and associations, networking receptions, industry conferences, and the annual New Venture Competitions, among other events.

Dan Schulman (MBA ’86), CEO and President of PayPal, offered advice to students and alumni who seek careers in the online commerce industry.

Karen Peetz, BNY Mellon president and founder of its women’s network, joined an interactive dialogue on diversity in business as part of the Leadership Development Speaker Series.
As one of the top Executive MBA programs, NYU Stern provides the academic preparation you need to drive your capabilities to the next level.

At Stern, you develop the intellectual breadth to manage decisively across every function as well as the strategic perspective and analytical skills to solve daunting business problems.

Through a rigorous general management program, students receive fundamental grounding in every business discipline, honing the ability to think laterally across different functional areas within an organization. Executive MBA class content is comprehensive and relevant, providing a mix of perspectives based in both theory and practice.

The core curriculum, taken mostly in the first year, supplies an expansive set of new business frameworks and management skills that can be applied immediately outside the classroom. As part of the core, all students participate in Global Study Tours—weeklong international residencies in dynamic markets.

In addition to the core curriculum, students can tailor their MBA program based on their professional goals and interests through choice of electives. Students also have the option of specializing in one or more areas of study. Whatever route you take, all paths lead to an NYU Stern MBA.
Faculty Powered by Theory and Practice

Anat Lechner, Clinical Associate Professor, answers questions in Leadership in Organizations
With one of the best faculties in the world, NYU Stern nurtures forward-thinking leaders while helping students develop a deeper set of skills and a broader perspective of the role of business in the world. Our faculty are actively engaged with business and receive global recognition for their research.
A far-reaching perspective is a necessity in today’s global business environment. Stern’s Executive MBA program imbues students with a broad business perspective that reaches beyond their experience.

Executive MBA students may participate in two required Global Study Tours: weeklong residencies that provide exposure to other global business centers. Executive MBA students explore the business practices of dynamic markets through site visits and meetings with high-level executives in key market industries, government representatives, and members of the diplomatic community.

Each of the two international residencies is a faculty-led three-credit course that is woven directly into the core curriculum. Students embark on one trip during their first year and one to a culturally and geographically different locale in the second year. The Global Study Tour preparation and experience are seamlessly integrated into the coursework of the MBA program.

The global aspect of the curriculum is further enhanced by the peer group with whom you are learning. Students bring varied cultural perspectives to the classroom dialogue through their extensive personal and professional experience in other countries.
Current students and recent alumni of the Executive MBA program come from 46 different countries. Recent global study tours have visited Argentina, Brazil, Chile, China, Croatia, Czech Republic, Germany, Greece, India, Japan, Morocco, Peru, South Korea, Spain, Thailand, United Arab Emirates, and Vietnam.
Executive MBA students have many competing demands on their time, whether it’s work, family, travel, or other personal or professional commitments.

The Executive MBA program is structured to enable students to earn an NYU Stern MBA while still keeping up with their professional and personal priorities.

On-campus classes are held on Friday and Saturday every other week to minimize required time out of the office. The two-full-day format allows students to completely focus on school life while they are with their classmates. Students take only two courses at a time, on an intensive basis, allowing them to master each new subject area before moving on to the next.

Executive MBA students receive a high level of individualized attention from both faculty and administrative staff. From meals to class materials and textbooks, our Student Services team manages the logistical details so that students are free to focus on what matters: work, life, and school.
IQ + EQ = Enhanced Collaboration

NYU Stern Executive MBA students are professionally and academically accomplished, with a self-awareness that demonstrates the strong emotional intelligence imperative in today’s business leaders. With this combination of intellectual and interpersonal skills, our Executive MBA students become partners in their educational experience, sharing knowledge and building upon each other’s strengths. Assigned cross-functional study groups further facilitate the peer-to-peer learning, allowing for discovery of diverse approaches to problem solving. Working within these high-performing teams, students are also able to complement each other’s skill sets and schedules.
A Transformational Experience

We offer an education that you can leverage from the first day of class to your last day at your desk.

Executive MBA graduates come away armed with an MBA from NYU Stern and a new set of skills that they have already been able to apply in their careers.
Each graduate’s lifelong bond with NYU Stern is deepened by:

- Access to our extensive, global alumni network of over 105,000
- Alumni events
- Lifelong career resources
- Continuing educational opportunities through the Executive MBA program, the Langone Part-time MBA program, and Executive Education open enrollment courses

“My Executive MBA experience at NYU Stern was wonderful. The professors exceeded my expectations and I am amazed by how much I grew. There have been numerous occasions when I’ve combined the skills I learned at Stern with my work as Mayor. Whatever chapter is next will lead me to something I can’t imagine today, but I’m a firm believer in lifelong learning.”

Mick Cornett
Class of 2011, Mayor of Oklahoma City
