When, through the vision of former Law School Dean John Sexton and Stern School Dean George Daly, the NYU Pollack Center for Law & Business was established in 1997, the aim of our center was to promote cross-pollination by students and faculty of the Law School and the Stern School. This brief report of the Center’s activities over the last two academic years presents a typical snapshot of how that vision has been realized. We hope you will agree that the regular activities of the Center and its periodic special projects more than satisfy the high expectations and hopes all those involved both with its founding and with its growth have had.

As an important part of its activities, the Pollack Center has initiated courses designed to bring MBA and law students into the same classrooms to work together in teams, sometimes on the analysis of major real world transactions. It annually sponsors scholarly conferences, such as the NYU Penn Law & Finance Conference (see page 23 in this report); it promotes other professional level engagement, such as its co-sponsoring, with Cambridge University Judge School of Business and the Guanghua School of Business at Beijing University, of the global Cross-Border M&A Conference (page 15), or its Directors’ Institute, which annually produces what we believe is the best one-day review and discussion of corporate governance in the nation (page 17). In addition, the Center brings in guest speakers to help students connect the material they learn in class with real world experiences of active professionals; it works with students to arrange student conferences relating to legal regulation of business, and provides opportunities for faculty to discuss their corporate governance related research. Finally we have been highly successful in helping to train a limited number of post graduate students who seek to begin a career of law teaching. Our Wagner program alumni now include young professors teaching at University of Arizona Law School, UCLA Law School, NYU School of Law, and this year our latest Wagner scholar will leave for his first tenure track appointment at Boston University School of Law.

Almost 13 years after its founding, the Pollack Center is no longer “the only kid on the block”. We now work closely with the Mitchell Jacobson Leadership Program in Law & Business at the Law School to train J.D. students in business related matters and with others in the Stern School who share the vision of improving professional education by opening the pathways between the Stern School and the Law School. The portfolio of “Law & Business” courses has grown substantially over the years, and the opportunities to make a positive difference in the education of young professionals remain many and inviting.

For our progress I want most importantly to thank those whose generosity helps promote this work, especially Lester Pollack, and the staff of the Pollack Center, Associate Director Hilary Peck and Program Coordinator Harold Jennings. I hope you enjoy paging through this brief report. Naturally we welcome comments and suggestions, and are grateful for your support.

Sincerely yours,

William T. Allen
CENTER PROGRAMS FOR STUDENTS
Certificate Program Continues to Provide Business Fundamentals to Law Students

The Advanced Professional Certificate in Law & Business (APCLB) has been created specifically for business lawyers. The program provides undergraduate and graduate law students with graduate-level business school training in conjunction with their law education. Over the summer, students take three Stern classes specially designed for them: Financial Accounting and Reporting; Statistics and Data Analysis; and Foundations of Corporate Finance. The professors for these courses are drawn from senior members of the faculty of the Stern School. Students complete additional electives during the Fall and Spring semesters, and they graduate with an Advanced Professional Certificate in Law & Business. In the summer of 2009, students participating in the program hailed from countries including Mexico, Peru, Spain, Switzerland, and the U.S. We were also pleased in 2009 to welcome students who studied in Singapore through the NYU@NUS program to the APCLB.

“I would recommend the APCLB program to anyone who wants to be in business litigation and, even more so, for students planning to work in corporate/transactional areas. The teachers were phenomenal, and the mix of local and international students made for lively and interesting discussions.”

NYU Journal of Law & Business Conference

Each year the NYU Journal of Law & Business, a student-edited publication, holds a symposium on a contemporary topic that highlights the interrelationship of law and business. In January 2010, the Journal sponsored its Fifth Annual Symposium entitled “Legal Aftershocks of the Global Financial Crisis.” Panelists examined significant developments in three areas of business regulation—corporate governance, regulation of financial institutions, and bankruptcy and restructuring of financial institutions. The event, held in the Law School’s Greenberg Lounge, featured numerous speakers, including Lucian Bebchuk of Harvard Law School, William Ackman of Pershing Square Capital Management, and Judge Jack Jacobs of the Delaware Supreme Court.

The Journal’s Fourth Annual Symposium, “Modernizing the Financial Regulatory Structure,” took place in February 2009. Panelists, including practitioners and academics, examined recent developments in the areas of Risk Management, Banking Regulation and Sovereign Wealth Funds. Both events drew packed audiences.

The John L. Vogelstein Scholars Program

This program is made possible by a generous gift from John L. Vogelstein, Managing Director and Senior Advisor at Warburg Pincus LLC, a member of the Stern School Board of Overseers and of the Board of Advisors of the Center.

The Scholars chosen each year demonstrate high academic and professional achievement as well as dedication to the field of corporate law. We are pleased to congratulate the summer 2009 Vogelstein scholars: Juan Felipe Sanchez Curiel and Gino Sangalli. Mr. Curiel plans to return to his home country Mexico to teach and practice law after completion of his LL.M. degree. Mr. Sangalli plans to return to his home country Peru to continue work in the Legal Advisor’s office of Edegel S.A.A, an energy company in Peru.
Stephen Lamb, Vice Chancellor of the Delaware Chancery Court, shared insights drawn from his twelve years of experience on the Court with Law students and others.
Students Engage with Senior Business Executives in Center’s Transition to Practice Course

Members of the Center’s academic board continue to offer courses in the Fall and Spring semesters to enhance the law and business education of NYU graduate students. Among these is our “Transition to Practice” course. This course is designed to allow graduating students of law and business to transition more rapidly and more effectively from the University environment to the world of practice. The course is taught by Gerald Rosenfeld, Deputy Chairman of Rothschild North America and co-director of the Mitchell Jacobson Leadership Program in Law & Business, and Professor William T. Allen. The course is built around a detailed analysis of several recent large corporate transactions, based upon the documents of each such transaction. The lawyers and bankers who completed the deal act as consultants to the student teams that analyze their transaction. Below is the list of deals presented in Spring 2010, each with associated overseer:

Lehman Brothers’ Divestiture of its Investment Management Division
Deal overseer: Christopher E. Austin, Partner, Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton LLP

Private Equity Investment in Flag Star Bank
Deal overseer: Joseph S. Berry, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division, Keefe, Bruyette & Woods

Plumb Point Financing
Deal overseers: David A. Gordon, Partner, Office Managing Partner, Latham & Watkins LLP / Matthew L. Henegar, Partner, Latham & Watkins LLP

Merger Negotiations Between M&F Worldwide Corp. and John H. Harland Corp.

We are very grateful for the participation of lawyers and businesspeople as tutors in our Transition to Practice course. Practitioners tend to find this exposure to teaching fun and satisfying, and students have very much enjoyed and benefited from this approach.
Cross-Registration Offerings a Continuing Success

The Center continues to expand the list of cross-registration courses available to students of the Stern School and the NYU School of Law. This initiative is the most direct way to achieve the Center’s goal of enriching the professional education of NYU law and business students. Under this program, the Registrar’s office at the Law School reserves several spaces for students at Stern, and vice versa. Law School students choose from a list of classes including Entrepreneurial Finance, Global Banking & Capital Markets, Venture Capital Financing, and Monetary Policy Banks & Center Banks, among many others. Stern students can register for classes in Corporations, Mergers & Acquisitions, Securities Regulations, and Corporate Finance.
In the 2009-2010 academic year, the student luncheon lecture series focused on the Role of the General Counsel. In October 2009, Andrew Hendry, General Counsel of Colgate-Palmolive Company, discussed the many roles of the general counsel – the General Counsel as Chief Counsel, as Global Legal Organization Leader, as Ethical Leader, as Business Executive, as Board Advisor, and as a Public Servant. In March 2010, Larry Thompson, General Counsel of PepsiCo, gave a presentation to students entitled “Thoughts on Business, Professionalism and Responsibility to Society,” in which he urged students to consider a career in public service.

In the 2008-2009 academic year, the student luncheon lecture series focused on Corporate Reorganizations. Stephen Ledoux, Managing Director of Rothschild Inc., addressed the broad restructuring of the US financial system and how this impacts the restructuring market. Mr. Ledoux cautioned that the effects of the US government’s action will be felt globally for many years.

Leonard Rosen, Retired Founding Partner of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz, reflecting on 25 years of representing institutional creditors, banks and debtors in workouts and Chapter 11 cases, to a packed audience of law and business students.

Marty Whitman, Founder and Co-Chief Investment Officer of Third Avenue Management LLC, offered an introduction to distressed investing, and encouraged students to consider going into the field after graduation: “I’ve never seen anything like the current environment. The opportunities are once in a lifetime.” Thomas Baxter, Jr., General Counsel and Executive Vice President of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, gave a lecture entitled “A Crisis Trilogy: Bear, Lehman, AIG.”

Wall Street’s Key Players Debate the Future of M&A

In October 2008, the Center gathered three leading takeover bankers, financiers, and lawyers to discuss the future of mergers and acquisitions in the post-credit-bubble world before an audience of NYU Law and NYU Stern students and alumni.

Stephen Friedman, retired chairman of Goldman Sachs and current Chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and of global private equity firm Stone Point Capital; Martin Lipton, founding partner of the law firm Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz; and Joseph Rice III, founder and chairman of private equity firm Clayton Dubilier & Rice, served as panelists. The discussion was moderated by Brett Cole, a writer for The Economist and author of M&A Titans: The Pioneers Who Shaped Wall Street’s Mergers and Acquisitions Industry.

Reflecting on the current U.S. economic turmoil, Rice argued that “human greed” was at fault. He also blamed an abundance of capital for encouraging the bubble because “people needed to find something to do with it.”

Friedman described the economic crisis as the greatest financial panic since the Great Depression. He attributed the problem, in part, to the incentive structures that were in place, which encouraged bad lending and faulty business practices: “People will play the way you pay them.” He blamed banks, consumers, and rating agencies.

Lipton predicted that the current economic crisis will last between three to five years. He also argued that there will be a new financial order dominated by large banks and filled with many small boutiques. “Capital raising will be in the hands of the big universal bank,” he said. “They will have the capital and the networks to do it.”

Discussing the future challenges and opportunities for M&A deals, Rice sounded optimistic, expecting that private equity will make a comeback. Although the buyout business is “comatose right now,” he said, “it is not going away. We will see a series of small deals next year and then they will grow in size.”

Lipton was also upbeat about the future of M&A. “There will always be M&A,” he said, but added that “M&A is very psychological, and CEOs don’t like to go to their boards in this type of economy” to get approval for a deal. Friedman agreed, saying that while this was a “brutal period,” leverage would come back into the system.
CENTER FOCUSES ON INTERNATIONAL ISSUES
International Institute for the Study of Cross-Border M&A

In October 2009, the International Institute for the Study of Cross-Border M&A (XBMA), a cooperative venture among leading business schools in China, the United States, and Europe, held its second annual symposium in Cambridge to consider the implications of the financial crisis and government intervention on cross-border activity. The symposium followed the success of the Institute’s inaugural symposium held in Beijing in June 2008. NYU’s Stern School of Business, the Judge School of Management at Cambridge University in England, and the Guanghua School of Management at Peking University were the sponsoring academic institutions. The symposium brought together leading business figures from China and the West, senior government officials, legal and banking experts, and academics to discuss the underlying forces, constraints and developments that are shaping or hindering important cross-border transactions and investments. Zhang Weiyin, Dean of Peking University Guahhua School of Management and one of the founders of the XBMA Institute, commented: “We have high hopes that, through programs like this, the XBMA Institute can contribute ideas, and ultimately actions, that will help make the global economy better and more efficient. As China’s integration into the global economy accelerates, cross-border M&A and investment promises to play an important role for Chinese companies to globalize and for multinational companies to participate in China’s economic growth.” Speakers at the Institute included: Jiang Jianqing, Chairman of Industrial and Commercial Bank of China (ICBC); Baron David de Rothschild, Chairman of N M Rothschild & Sons Ltd; Martin Lipton, Founding Partner of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz; Richard Li, Chairman of PCCW Ltd and Pacific Century Group; Peter Clarke, CEO of Man Group; Fu Chengyu, Chairman and CEO of China National Offshore Oil Corporation Ltd (CNOOC); Takumi Shibata, Deputy President and COO, Nomura Holdings Inc; Lord Mervyn Davis, Minister of Trade & Investment, UK; and Wang Jianzhou, Chairman and CEO of China Mobile Ltd.

The next XBMA conference is scheduled to take place on the NYU campus in October 2010.
CENTER PROGRAMS FOR PRACTITIONERS
Directors’ Education

Each year, the Center hosts the Directors’ Institute, a director education program designed to strengthen the corporate governance practices of boards of directors. The program is an intensive one-day event open to experienced and new directors, as well as general counsels and corporate secretaries. The event is accredited by RiskMetrics-ISS Governance Services and by the National Association of Corporate Directors. Attorneys who are admitted in New York are eligible to receive Continuing Legal Education (CLE) credit for their attendance.

The 2009 Institute, “Board Monitoring of Risk Management,” was structured around several panel discussions. To help set a background for the day’s discussion of board responsibilities, Joseph Tracy, Executive Vice President and Director of Research at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, shared with the Institute the New York Fed’s view of the current and future regional and national economy.

Thomas French, a Partner at Willkie Farr & Gallagher, offered a timely tutorial on “What Every Director Should Know about Asset Backed-Securities and Credit Default Swaps.”

The luncheon keynote address was delivered by Richard Ketchum, Chairman & CEO of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA). Mr. Ketchum spoke about financial reform legislation in the US and abroad. He argued that the present financial turmoil creates opportunities and suggested that regulators address the lack of transparency with over-the-counter derivatives, improve surveillance of the equity markets, create legislation that establishes a clear set of principles, develop one oversight body of investment advisors and broker/dealers, and resolve turf issues.
“Timely topics, excellent format, outstanding faculty!”
—Corporate Director, 2009 Directors’ Institute

Additional Faculty at the 2009 Institute Included:

Paul Curnin, Partner of Simpson Thacher & Bartlett; Julie Hembrock Daum, North American Board Services Practice Leader at Spencer Stuart; Jeremy Goldstein, Partner of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz; David Katz, Partner of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz; Daniel Kramer, Partner of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison; Simon Lorne, Vice Chairman & Chief Legal Officer of Millennium Management LLC; Lawrence Pedowitz, Partner of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz; Linda Rappaport, Partner of Shearman & Sterling; Anthony Santomero, Senior Advisor of McKinsey & Co; Richard Steinberg, Founder & Principal, of Steinberg Governance Advisors; Audrey Strauss, Partner of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson; Honorable Leo Strine, Jr., Vice Chancellor of the Delaware Court of Chancery; David Swinford, President & CEO of Pearl Meyer & Partners; and Christopher Young, Director of M&A and Proxy Fight Research at RiskMetrics Group.

The next Directors’ Institute, “Corporate Governance: Responding to New Challenges,” will take place in May 2010 with Keynote speaker John Thain of CIT Group.

Bankruptcy and Business Reorganization Workshop

Each year the Center, in association with Professor Barry Adler at the NYU School of Law, organizes the Lawrence P. King and Charles Seligson Workshop on Bankruptcy and Business Reorganization. The workshop comprises two simultaneous programs: a basic program for general practitioners and business professional who desire a grounding in the fundamentals of bankruptcy law and practice; and an advanced program for practitioners and financial professionals who are experienced in the business reorganization process. Participating faculty have written and lectured extensively on the Code, and many are members of the National Bankruptcy Conference. Attorneys who are admitted to practice in New York are eligible to receive Continuing Legal Education (CLE) credit.
Robert Pozen Considers Post-Financial Crisis Regulation in Keynote at Joint NYU Law-Stern Conference

In January 2010 the Center, together with the Jacobson Leadership Program in Law and Business, hosted a conference on “U.S. Financial Regulation After the Crisis.” Robert Pozen, Chairman of MFS Investment and former Vice Chairman of Fidelity Investments and President of Fidelity Management & Research Company, delivered the keynote address.

Pozen evaluated the efficacy of the government’s response to the crisis and tried to determine how best to prevent future crises. Placing the roots of the crisis in excessive U.S. consumer spending and an international trade imbalance, Pozen pointed out that the U.S. budget deficit in the most recent fiscal year was roughly double that of any other year since World War II and that these issues needed to be addressed to help avert future crises. He also questioned the nature of the Federal Reserve’s involvement in attempting to save troubled corporations: “If we are going to solve this financial crisis and prevent future ones, we need to get the Fed back to its independent position and to have the Fed not be involved in these sorts of bailouts over and over again.”

Following Pozen’s keynote, a panel moderated by Center Director William T. Allen delved further into post-financial crisis regulation. Also participating in the panel were NYU Law Professor Geoffrey Miller, NYU Stern Professor Matthew Richardson, and Christopher Allen, senior managing director of Resource America.

“We in fact have no theory of ‘too big to fail.’ We have no coherent rationale, and we have no process.... What is the rationale by which we bail out institutions?”

—Robert Pozen
Center and American Academy of Arts & Sciences Suggest Solutions for Challenges to Business and Society in the 21st Century

In November 2009, the Center co-hosted the 1950th meeting of the American Academy of Arts & Sciences, “Challenges to Business & Society in the 21st Century: The Way Forward.” Rajat Gupta, Senior Partner Emeritus and Former Managing Director at McKinsey & Company, spoke about recovery and reform. Mr. Gupta discussed the need for an “adequate engagement model to bring together all stakeholders” worldwide to address the recovery of the global economy, the reduction of greenhouse gases, and healthcare reform. He underscored the need for businesses to work together with NGOs, governments and non-profits to address these issues. He urged business leaders to seek “natural intersections between their organizations and society, mobilize other leaders and engage regulators, stand up and be counted, and work in partnership across sectors.”

Roger Ferguson, President and CEO of TIAA-CREF, addressed long-term financial security. Mr. Ferguson said he believes the lack of financial literacy in the US contributed greatly to the current financial crisis. He pointed out that Americans are responsible for their lifetime income and retirement savings now more than ever before, but the average American family will have only 2/3 of the income needed to retire. He suggested that the US create a holistic system that (1) ensures employees’ full participation and automatic enrollment in retirement accounts with savings of at least 10-14 percent of their pay; (2) helps employees manage risk by offering them 15-20 options for diversified plans; (3) provides financial education to employees; (4) and offers incentives to employees to save for medical expenses that occur during retirement. He also advised businesses to focus on their own financial security by strengthening their risk management programs and resisting “short-termism” by focusing instead on sustaining their health for the long-term.
If You Can’t Control the Wind, Adjust Your Sails

In September 2008, the Center co-hosted with Willkie Farr & Gallagher a conference devoted to topics of interest to the private fund community. Panels consisting of regulators, industry participants, and attorneys discussed issues including responding to volatile markets, dealing with increased regulation and enforcement, anticipating litigation, and targeting opportunities.

"For me, the Pollack Center for Law & Business has been the ideal forum for real-time discussion and analysis of this historic financial crisis. Leading bankers, lawyers, government officials, judges, and academics in law and finance have presented their divergent views at lectures, seminars, and social gatherings. The ideas shared here these past two years will shape my own academic career for decades, and will continue to transform the public debate about some of the most challenging and important questions of our time."

—David Webber 2008-2010 Wagner Fellow

Fellowships

The Center awards research support each year to graduate students and professionals in finance and corporate law. Past fellows have gone on to pursue careers in academia, professional practice, and government service. For the 2009-2010 academic year, we were pleased to support the following fellow:

David Webber—Wagner Fellow. Thanks to a generous grant of the Leonard Wagner Testamentary Trust, the Center offers a research fellowship to help develop future academics with an interest in the social control of business institutions and the social responsibility of business. Our Wagner Fellow for the 2008-2010 academic year, David Webber, graduated magna cum laude from Columbia University, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Mr. Webber graduated from NYU Law School, where he was a Notes Development Editor for the New York University Law Review and a Lawrence Lederman/Milbank Tweed Fellow in Law and Business. His research focuses on the role of public pension funds in securities class action litigation. In Summer 2010, David will join the faculty of Boston University Law School as an Associate Professor of Law.

Recent NYU Corporate Governance Research

Professors at NYU Stern School of Business and the NYU School of Law have published a number of papers recently on the topic of corporate governance, many of which have received substantial coverage in the national media. The Center compiles academic working papers on a variety of topics related to law, business, finance and economics, with a special focus on corporate governance.

Xavier Gabaix. “Dynamic Incentive Accounts” Alex Edmans, The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania; Xavier Gabaix, NYU Stern School of Business, National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER), Centre for Economic Policy Research (CEPR); Tomasz Sadzik, NYU Department of Economics; Yuliy Sannikov, University of California, Berkley, Department of Economics, August 2009
Contracts in a dynamic model must address a number of issues absent from static frameworks. Shocks to firm value may weaken the incentive effects of securities (e.g. cause options to fall out of the money), and the impact of some CEO actions may not be felt until far in the future. The authors derive the optimal contract in a setting where the CEO can affect firm value through both productive effort and costly manipulation, and may undo the contract by privately saving. The optimal contract takes a surprisingly simple form, and can be implemented by a “Dynamic Incentive Account.” The CEO’s expected pay is escrowed into an account, a fraction of which is invested in the firm’s stock and the remainder in cash. The account features state-dependent rebalancing and time-dependent vesting. It is constantly rebalanced so that the equity fraction remains above a certain threshold; this threshold sensitivity is typically increasing over time even in the absence of career concerns. The account vests gradually both during the CEO’s employment and after he quits, to deter short-termist actions before retirement.

Viral Acharya and Yakov Amihud. “Creditor Rights and Corporate Risk Taking” Viral Acharya, NYU Stern School of Business; Yakov Amihud, NYU Stern School of Business; Lubomir Litov, Washington University in St. Louis-Olin Business School, July 2009

The authors analyze the link between creditor rights and firms’ investment policies, proposing that stronger creditor rights in bankruptcy reduce corporate risk-taking. In cross-country analysis, the authors find that stronger creditor rights induce greater propensity of firms with low-recovery assets to acquire targets with high-recovery assets. These relationships are strongest in countries where management is dismissed in reorganization, and are observed in time-series analysis around changes in creditor rights. The authors’ results question the value of strong creditor rights as they have an adverse effect on firms by inhibiting management from undertaking risky investments.

Marcel Kahan and Stephen Choi. “Director Elections and Role of Proxy Advisors” Marcel Kahan, NYU Law School; Stephen Choi, NYU Law School; Jill Fisch, University of Pennsylvania Law School, August 2008

This paper was selected as one of ten best corporate and securities articles of 2009 by Corporate Practice Commentator. Using a dataset of proxy recommendations and voting results for uncontested director elections from 2005 and 2006 at S&P 1500 companies, the authors examine how advisors make their recommendations. Of the four firms they study, Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS), Proxy Governance (PGI), Glass Lewis (GL), and Egan Jones (EJ), ISS has the largest market share and is widely regarded as the most influential. The authors find that the four proxy advisory firms differ substantially from each other both in their willingness to issue a withhold recommendation and in the factors that affect their recommendation. It is not clear that these differences, or the bases for the recommendations, are transparent to the institutions that purchase proxy advisory services. If the differences are not apparent, investors may not accurately perceive the information content associated with a withhold recommendation, and investors may rely on those recommendations based on an erroneous understanding of the basis for that recommendation. To the extent that proxy advisors aggregate information for the purpose of facilitating an informed shareholder vote, these limitations may impair the effectiveness of the shareholder franchise. If the differences are apparent, the results show that investors, through selecting a proxy advisor, can indirectly choose the bases for their vote on directors. To that extent, it is likely that proxy advisory firms will retain more investor clients if their recommendations are based on factors that their clients consider relevant.
